Rainbow Sang. in 1983, ultimately winning the Male Vocalist category. Since the original song version is typically considered "the standard," we don't include it in our overall rankings. Instead, we display it first for comparison, with up to 14 contenders presented next in ranked order. Use the polls below to vote on your preferences: At the start of the film, part of the song is played by the MGM orchestra over the opening credits. A reprise of it was deleted after being filmed. An additional chorus was to be sung by Dorothy while she was locked in the Witch's castle, helplessly awaiting death as the hourglass ran out. However, although the visual portion of that reprise is presumably lost, the soundtrack of it survives and was included in the 2-CD Deluxe

Edition of the film's soundtrack released by Rhino Entertainment in 1995. In that intense rendition, Dorothy cries her way through it, unable to finish, concluding with, "I'm frightened, Auntie Em, I'm frightened!" This phrase was retained in the film and is followed immediately by Aunt Em's brief appearance in the crystal ball, where she is soon replaced by the visage of the witch (Hamilton), mocking and taunting Dorothy before turning toward the camera to cackle. Another instrumental version is played in the underscore in the final scene and over the closing credits. [It was sent as an audio wakeup call to astronauts about the STS-88 space shuttle mission on Flight Day 4, dedicated to astronaut Robert D. Cabana by his daughter Sara. [11]. Myrna Loy hums the song after it plays in the background in. The first German version in the English language was recorded by the Swing Orchestra Heinz Wehner (1908–1945) in March 1940 in Berlin. Wehner, at this time a well-known international German swing artist, [28]. This rendition is so heavy on the hurt that it's hard to listen to. Rufus sings like he has a killer migraine. (Do you notice him holding his head and stroking his face in a self-comforting manner?). "Canadian Hot 100: Week of June 26, 2010 (Biggest Jump)". On October 7, 1938, Judy Garland recorded the song on the MGM soundstage with an arrangement by Murray Cutter. In September 1939, a studio recording of the song, not from the film soundtrack, was recorded and released as a single for Decca. In March 1940, that same recording was included on a Decca 78 four-record studio cast album entitled The Wizard of Oz. Although this isn't the version that appeared in the film, Decca continued to release the "cast album" into the 1960s after it was reissued on disc, a 33 1/3 -rpm album. (1998) and released as a single in 2001. It debuted at number 88 on the UK Singles Chart in February 2001 and climbed to number 42 in May, becoming Cassidy's first single to chart in the United Kingdom. In Scotland, it reached number 36, giving Cassidy her first top-forty single in that region. It was her highest-charting song in the United Kingdom until 2007, when "What a Wonderful World" reached number one. [32]. Shriver, Jerry (June 13, 2014). "Songwriters gala links old and new with a 'Rainbow' ". USA Today. a.m. He was given 15 minutes to arrive by Milan Bertosa. Bertosa said, "And in walks the largest human being I had seen in my life. Israel was probably like 500 pounds. And the first thing at hand is to find something for him to sit on." A security guard gave Israel a large steel chair. "Then I put up some microphones, do a quick sound check, roll tape, and the first thing he does is 'Somewhere Over the Rainbow.' He played and sang, one take, and it was over." [31]. Danielle Hope, the winner of the BBC talent show. Pink followed in Jewel's footsteps and included the rarely sung introduction to "Over the Rainbow" when she performed the classic tune at the 2014 Academy Awards. It was the 75th anniversary celebration of the Wizard of Oz movie's release, and among those in attendance were Judy Garland's TEENren, including daughter Liza Minelli. Judy Garland's original version will always be best. "Over the Rainbow" was given the Towering Song Award by the Songwriters Hall of Fame and was sung at its dinner on June 12, 2014, by Jackie Evancho. [9]. Breathtaking and cherubic. Eva Cassidy blesses listeners with her gossamer-like vocals in this delicate and wistful blues-tinged rendition that is over five and a half minutes long. She sounds like a sweet, clinically depressed angel who needs a dose of Prozac. With its unique inflections, she breathes into it a sense of loss, hope, and far more maturity than the original. Eva gives this song the gift of perspective, and this creatively rendered work of art sounds like an entirely different piece altogether. She elevates the song. You may notice the video features distribution of Iz's ashes in the ocean. Weighing over 757 pounds at his heaviest and about 500 pounds at his death, he died of obesity-related causes in 1997 at age 38. He draws out his lyrics dramatically—I didn't say effectively, just dramatically—and he fails to enunciate his words. You would have to be a die-hard fan to savor this offering. Playing it on repeat might make a good albeit unusu 7. "Over the Rainbow" by Patti LaBelle & The Bluebells (1966). Man, Ol' Blue Eyes shows off his voice of velvet here. He wasn't even 30 years old yet in this recording. Backed by singers and an orchestra that sound like they're straight outta Disney's Bambi movie, Mr. Sinatra promotes this song to a work of art with his smooth voice that floats through several lines of extra lyrics in the middle. Although he didn't creatively reimagine the song like the first two contenders, his vocals are impeccable. Classy. Top-notch. They don't make 'em like this anymore. The original song title for "Over the Rainbow" was "Over the Rainbow Is Where I Want to Be." Written specifically for The Wizard of Oz, the ditty was deleted from the movie three times because producers judged it too serious for the role of Dorothy, who was supposedly a TEEN of 12. However, Judy Garland's voice coach and an associate producer believed in the song and teamed up in advocating hard for adding it back in. 6. "Over the Rainbow" by Eric Clapton (2001). Son of the Mask, and the television series. Music enthusiast FlourishAnyway introduces some fun competition into the songs that have been covered by many artists by ranking them. Nicholas David, a contestant on the third season of The Voice, recorded a version that went to number 96 on the Billboard Hot 100 in 2012 with sales of 48,000 copies. [46]. With a sense of soft melancholy, Dorothy imagines escaping her troubles. Her mind floats to a dreamland she once heard about in a lullaby. Garland channels her aspirations into the song lyrics as if her life depends upon it. The song effectively embodies all the innocence and earnestness of a 16-year-old girl. The film version of "Over the Rainbow" was unavailable to the public until the soundtrack was released by MGM in 1956 to coincide with the television premiere of The Wizard of Oz. [3]. 9. "Over the Rainbow/What a Wonderful World" by Cliff Richard (2001). the young character of Judy Garland, sings this classic tune before a tornado rips her from her Kansas home then transports her to the technicolor promise land of Oz. Trouble looms for Dorothy, as she stands in the barnyard and reflects upon her dilemma. Anxious, Dorothy cannot control her beloved dog, Toto, from repeatedly getting away from her. The dog has now bitten the vindictive townswoman, Mrs. Gulch, who has levied threats to retaliate against them both. ("I'll get you, my pretty and your little dog, too!"). An orchestral version appears several times in the 1941 movie. I found that the doo-wop ditty concept of this song worked better than its reality. The members of the quartet sang over one another, so it was difficult to clearly understand some of their words at times even though I knew the lyrics. Also, the song seemed to drag, and it acquired an unappealing "sing song" quality. Although the listener gets the point within the first minute of the song, it was worth a listen. Country star Trisha Yearwood brings in an orchestra to back her up and does yeoman's work in replicating the classic song. But while her rendition is pleasant enough she plays it safe and does not take chances vocally beyond belting out the line, "Somewhere over the rainbow." Yearwood sidesteps the opportunity to reimagine this song with a fresh approach like some other singers, thus I found her contribution to lack creativity and compelling emotional depth in comparison to higher ranked contenders. Sorry, Trish. In March 2010 it was the second best-selling download in Germany with digital sales between 500,000 and 600,000. [17]. Vincent Price sings the song to ironic effect at the very end of his 1972 cult classic fantasy-horror film, Wenn Du in meinen Träumen (Over the Rainbow), Inge Brandenburg mit dem N. As it was recorded before a winner was announced, runners-up Lauren Samuels and Sophie Evans also recorded versions. [37]. In the 1939 movie The Wizard of Oz, Dorothy, 10. "Over the Rainbow" by Katharine McPhee (2006). "Hot 100: Week of June 26, 2010 (Biggest Jump)". Billboard 200 with 54,000 album-equivalent units, of which 50,000 were pure album sales. [40]. In the U.S., it was certified Platinum for 1,000,000 downloads sold. [13]. Add to this the listener's realization that this astonishingly talented woman bounced around the local District of Columbia club circuit, unable to support herself by her music alone, before dying in relative obscurity at age 33 from melanoma that had spread to her bones. It was our loss that songbird Eva Cassidy wasn't "discovered" until after she was gone. In the time since her death, her recordings have sold over 10 million copies, and she has since acquired famous fans, including Paul McCartney, Michelle Kwan, and Eric Clapton. James Stewart sings the song while carrying a drunken Katharine Hepburn in. and is included in the piano sheet music from the film. It was also used in versions by Tony Bennett, Al Bowlly, Doris Day, Ella Fitzgerald, Frank Sinatra, Sarah Vaughan, Trisha Yearwood, Melissa Manchester, Hilary Kole, and Norma Waterson. Judy Garland sang the introductory verse only once, on a 1948 radio broadcast of The Louella Parsons Show. [6]. The decision to record this song was a last minute one, and it profoundly changed both his life and legacy. Iz's version was used in several films, television programs, and tv commercials ranging from those for deodorant to cars, soap to cereal. When they started off with "do do do do," I was already thinking "no no no no." Since they burst on the scene in 2011 as winners of NBC's The. Beyond today's everyday troubles, something better awaits. That is the hopeful message relayed in this song. Perhaps that's why it was named as. Sing-Off, Pentatonix has us so spoiled with their unbelievable a capella renditions of popular songs that when they produce one that's just average, it's a bitter disappointment. This cover lacks their usual spark, and particularly later in the song, it becomes clear that there are too many people involved in this venture. The first German version in German language was sung by Inge Brandenburg (1929–1999) in 1960. [30]. "600.000 Verkäufe: Michel Teló legt Download-Rekord hin - media control". Media-control.de. The same artist who brought us the 1976 pop hit "Devil Woman" offers this positive, uplifting, cover of Judy Garland's original. In it, he channels Iz's spirit, minus the ukelele, and offers a rock version of Israel Kamakawiwo'ole's blending of "Over the Rainbow" and "What a Wonderful World." Although I wish Richard offered something different vocally than simply trying to imitate another musician's sound, his voice floated effortlessly through the song, and I liked the rock instrumentals. Billy Thorpe and the Aztecs's version topped the Australian music charts in 1965. Another version charted in 1974 after Thorpe's blues-based revival of the song at the 1973 Sunbury Pop Festival.
